| In the academic year 2010-11, the University of Barcelona provides the most broad-ranging academic offering in Catalonia, serving over 50,000 students each year. It offers undergraduate and postgraduate degree courses in both face-to-face and distance learning modes. In research, the UB works on the frontier of such disciplines as biomedicine and biotechnology, with its efforts in a number of other fields including telecommunications, computer science, the humanities, health and the arts, where its research has citations in the most prestigious international publications.

The result of its efforts to improve its offering, the University of Barcelona is once again the top Spanish university in the biggest international project producing rankings of higher education institutions. As a national and, following the institution of its first Campus of International Excellence (CIE) in conjunction with the Technical University of Catalonia (UPC) and the UB, it has now achieved recognition on its second CIE: the Health University of Bellvitge and Barcelona (UBC-BV). An indication of their firm commitment to the city of which they form part. UB’s six campuses are strategically placed across the Barcelona inner city area, thereby fostering the community which has helped us establish a position where we can face the challenges of the future.
