

OPEN CALL

Teaching Collaboration for PhD Students at IBEI

Academic Course 2022–2023

Strong teaching skills are an integral part of the qualifications required for a successful career inside and even outside academia (e.g. many non-academic institutions also regularly engage in internal and external training activities). Pre-doctoral researchers interested in gaining initial teaching experiences without the obligation of having to design and lead an entire course on their own have the opportunity to participate as assistants in teaching activities at IBEI. Most of the teaching will focus on conducting seminars with small groups of students, but other supportive collaborations are also possible.

This call is aimed for declarations of interest to the community of Political Science and International Relations PhD students in Barcelona. Interested candidates can submit their CVs for inclusion in the institute's roster of potential teaching assistants for the academic course 2022-2023. Candidates will then be selected in a competitive process and according to the institute's teaching needs in the following academic year. Inclusion in the teaching roster does not guarantee being incorporated into the teaching program.

A per-hour economic compensation will be provided for PhD students who do not have scholarships or any other type of full-time funding.

Applications must be submitted by July 15, 2022.

For inclusion in the roster, candidates should submit:

- An updated CV
- A proof of inclusion in a relevant PhD programme
- A letter of motivation, outlining relevant areas of expertise and/or prior teaching experience

The application should be saved as one PDF document and sent to: Carlos Sanchez, research coordinator at IBEI (csanchez@ibei.org).
